Democrat Brian Wahler will preserve
the Cornell Dairy Farm

Brian has a plan for responsible growth that ensures our quality of life

We all know how important it is for Piscataway to strike a balance between preserving parts of our past and following sensible guidelines for development. Democrat Brian Wahler understands this balance.

During his eight years on the Piscataway Township Council, Brian was an advocate for responsible growth. As mayor, Brian will continue this work, urging the Township to preserve the dairy farm, stopping uncontrolled growth, and acquiring more open space.

Brian knows how important landmarks such as the Cornell Dairy Farm are to our community. That's why he is a strong supporter of the proposal to preserve it as a working farm through the Farmland Preservation Program, or buying the farm- with full and fair compensation to the owners- so its 75 acres will not be touched by developers.

Politicians will say anything, but Democrat Brian Wahler has gone to a new low. Imagine, suing the owners of the Cornell Farm, the Halper family, in an effort to kick them off their own farm, and then sending out mail with a picture of the farm and saying he wants to preserve it!

The fact is Brian and his running mates have always had a close financial relationship with developers, which explains why Brian, "Mr Open Space", doesn't object to the strip mall going up next to the Cornell Farm. With his dismal record of over development, is there really any doubt what he and his political bosses will do if they get their hands on the farm?

The Halper family wants nothing to do with Brian and he is certainly not their friend. Send Brian a message on election day by voting for the only candidates who have stood up for the Halpers.

Vote for the Local Republican Team!
